

HALLOWEEN WORKSHEET: MONSTER FEELINGS

Nonverbal communication refers to how you express what you think or feel without using words. Instead, we may use tone of voice, body language, facial expressions, or eye contact. Nonverbal communication activities are a great way to enhance critical social and emotional skills; and, in this activity, students will practice identifying and creating facial expressions and body language. Recognizing these expressions in others is a key empathy skill in understanding how others are feeling.

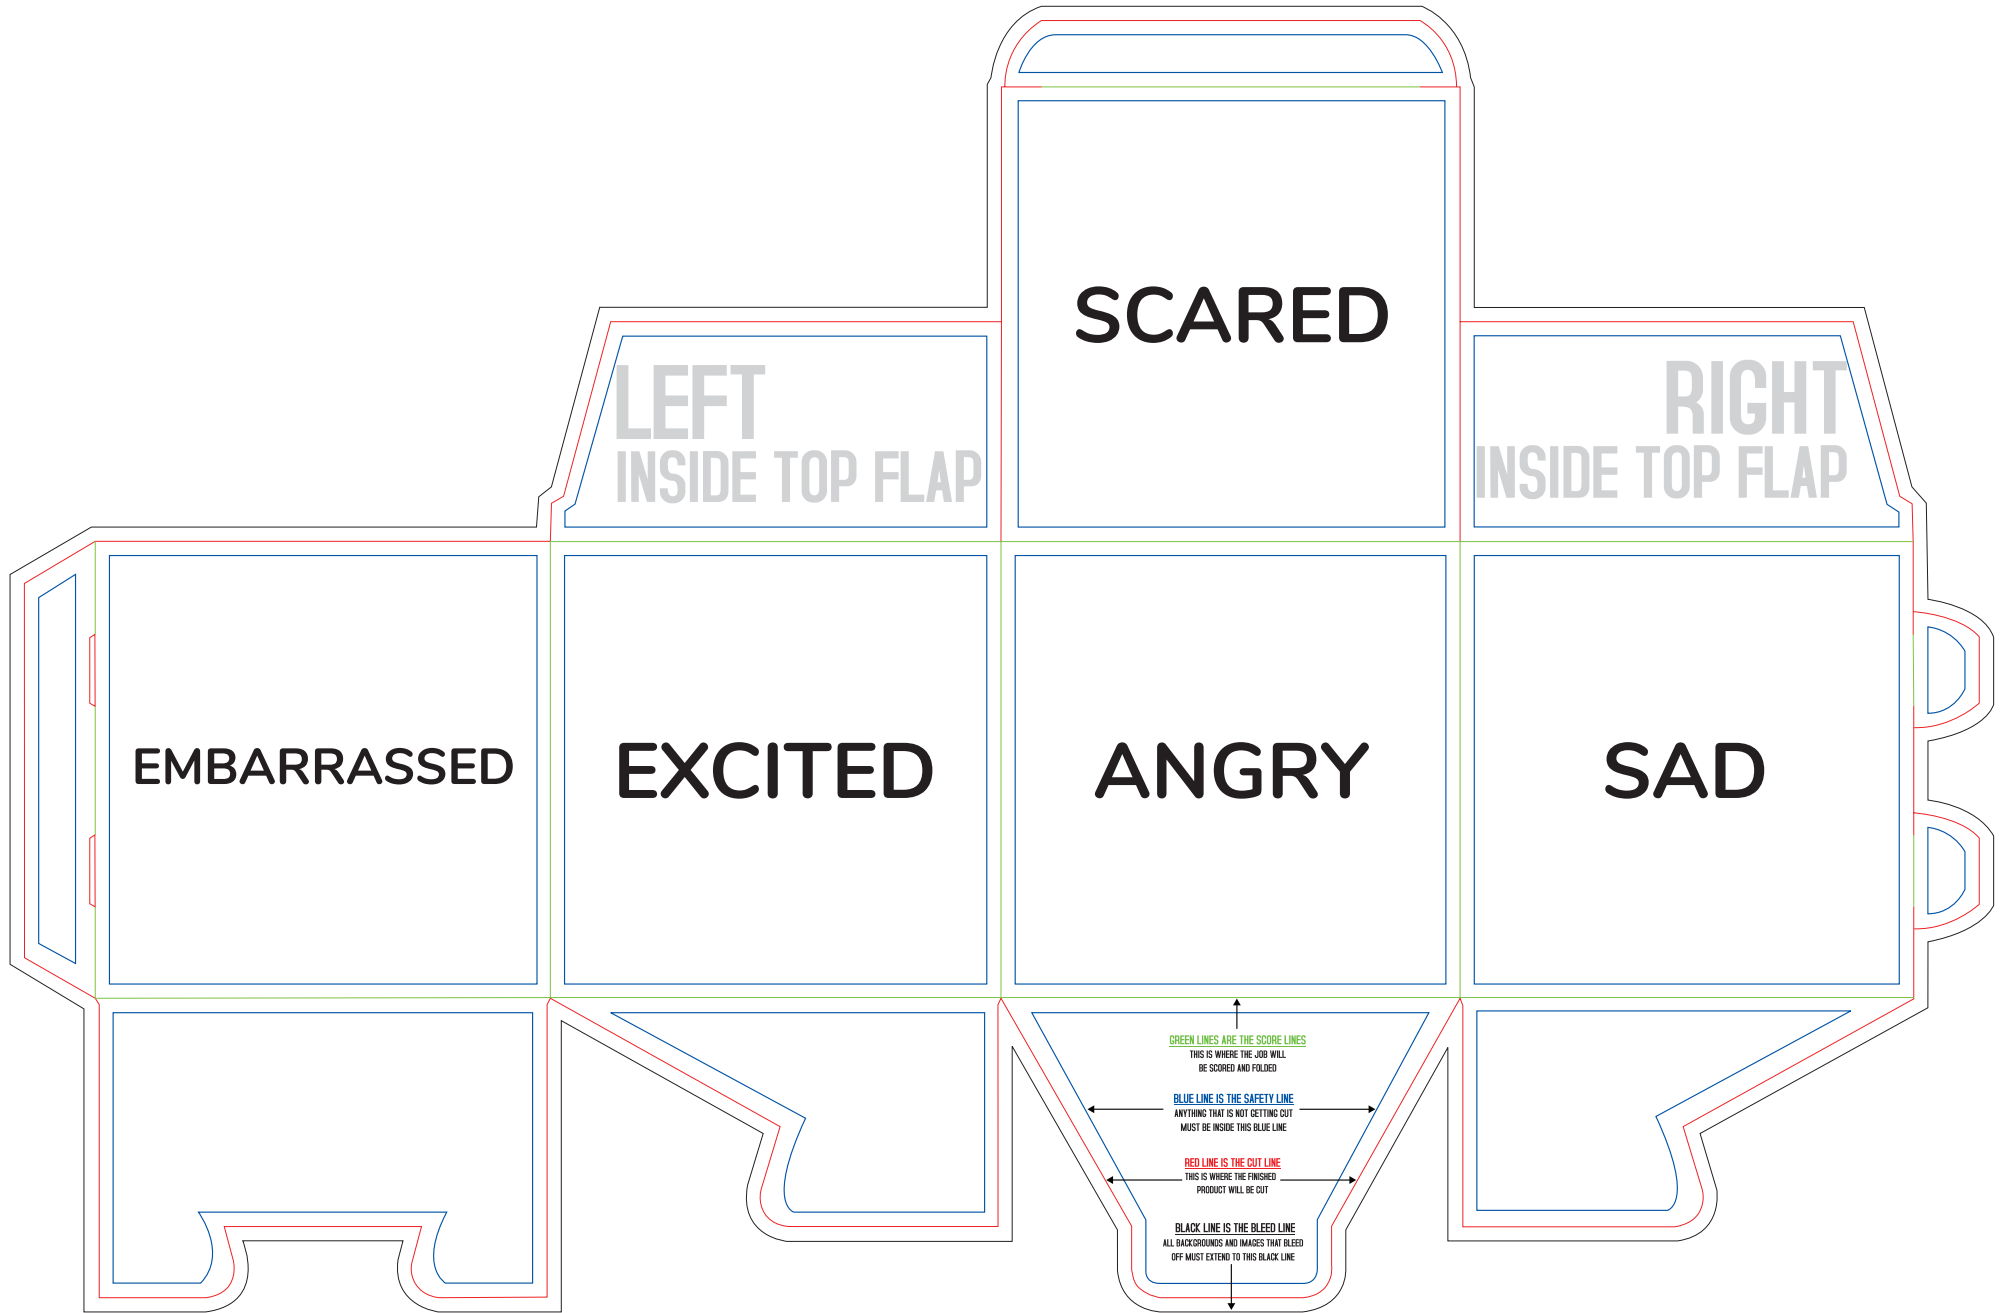

Directions

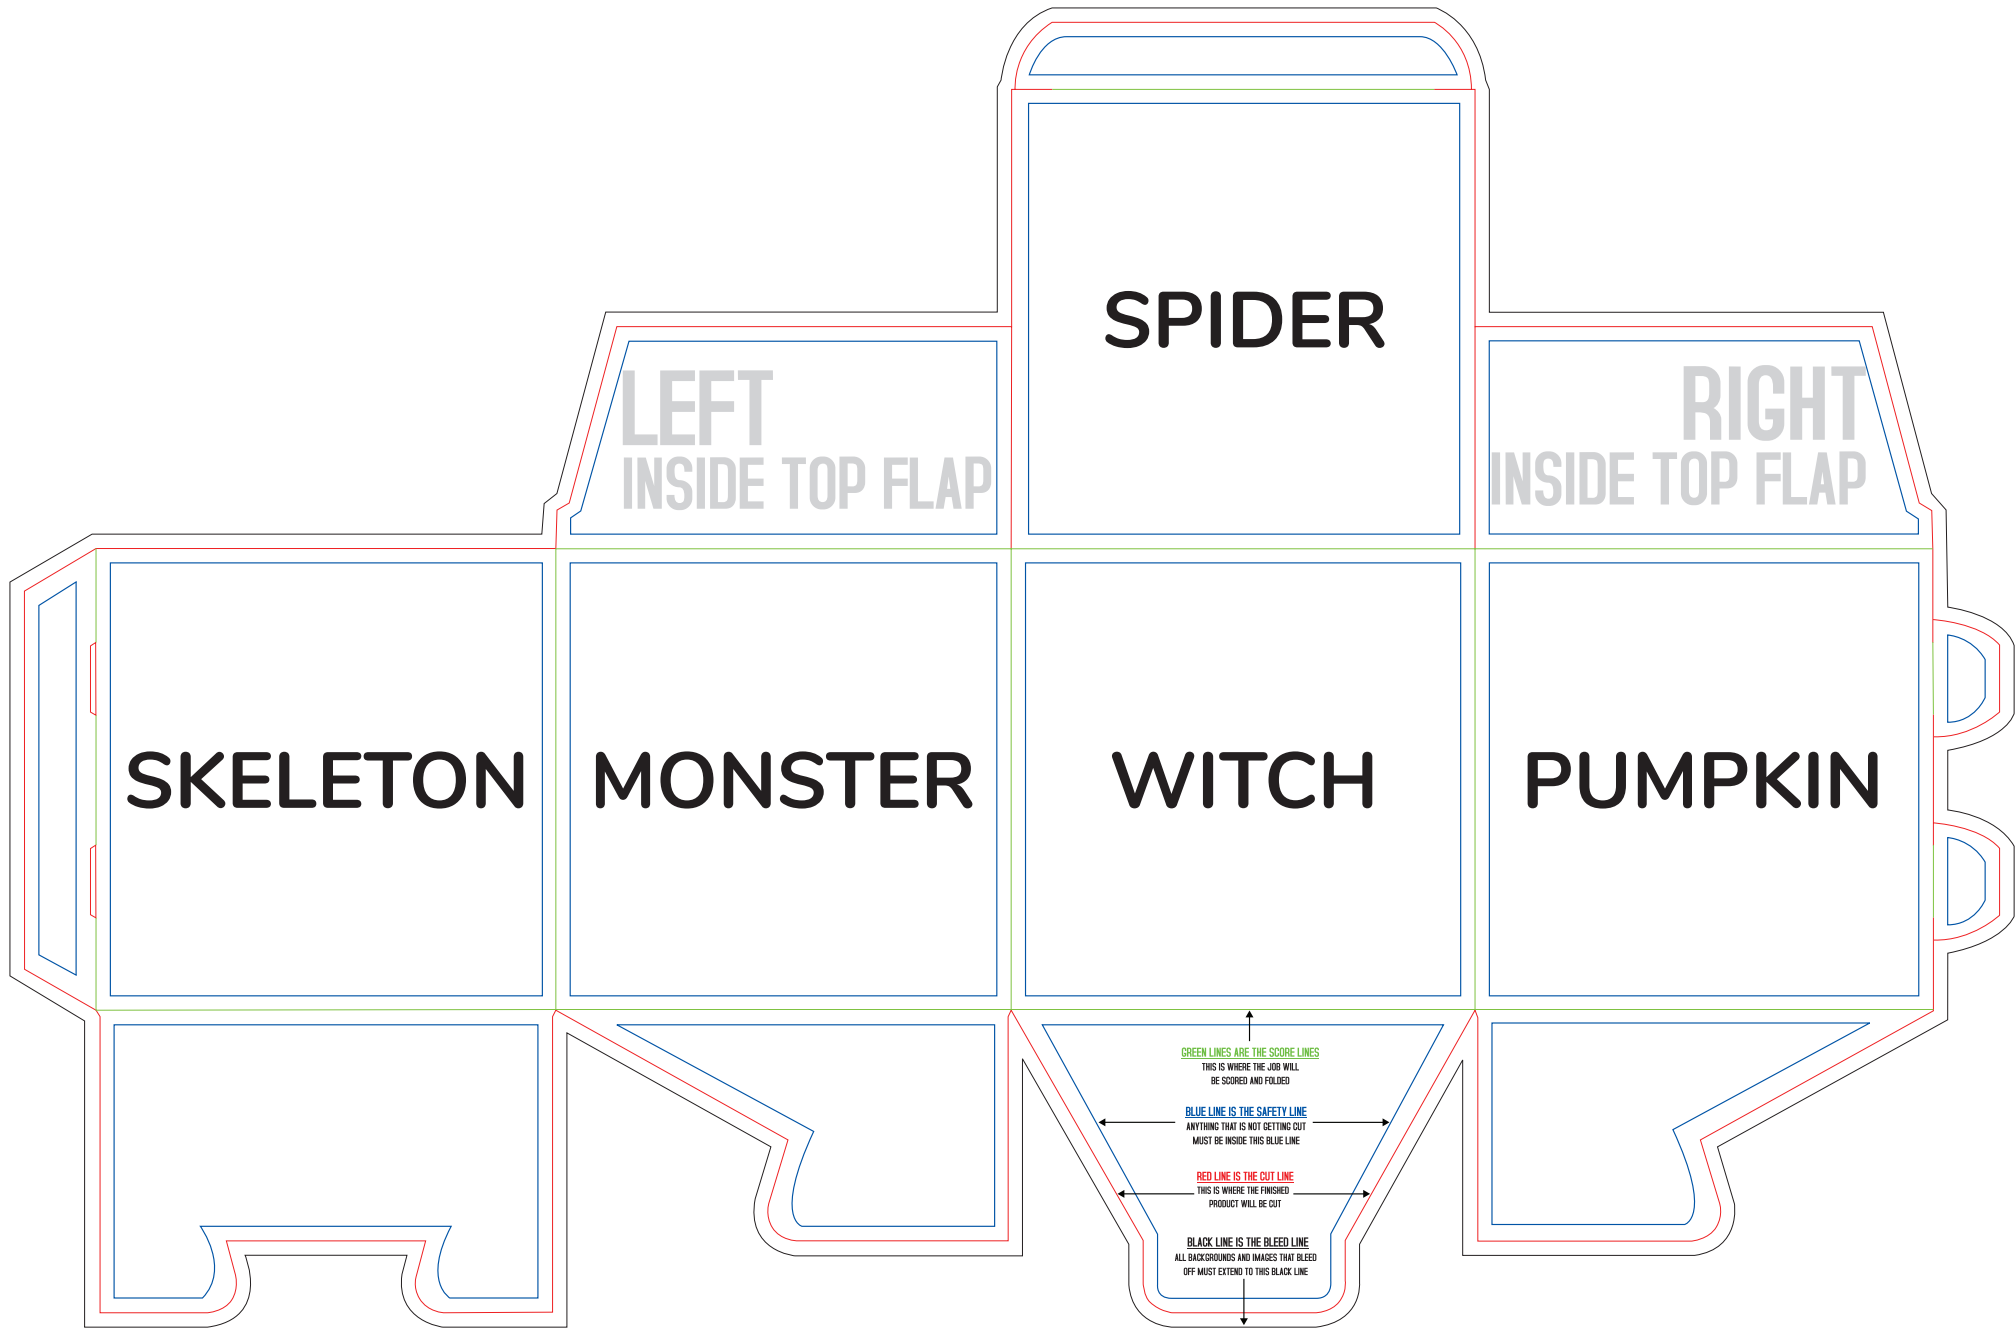

Educators: Cut out the dice on the next two pages along the red line. Fold along the green lines, assemble the paper cube, and secure with tape.

Depending on your student's interests and skill level, give them one or more of the options below:

Roll both dice to see which emotion word and character you are given. Then,

- draw a picture of the given character experiencing that emotion.
- write a story about the character and why they are experiencing that emotion.
- act out the character experiencing that emotion for other students to guess.
